Chapter 1 by Kylie Naranjo

It was a dark and stormy night the shy was pitch black and it was pouring down hard. Thunder was pounding the sky and lighting was so bright it lit up like Christmas. I was home alone everyone left for some dinner at a friends house and I didn't feel like going. It was just me and my dog sitting on the couch watching t.v. all alone in this big and dark house. I went to kitchen to get me a snack and something to drink. As soon as I go back to the living room and sat on the couch the power went out. It was just me and my little dog. All alone is this big house. I used the light from my phone to guide me through the house so I could find a flashlight. I couldn't find a flashlight anywhere. I looked all over the house and didn't find anything. So the last place I had to go look at in the basement and that was the last place i wanted to be on a night like this. So me and my little puppy went down to the basement together. We were both scared like a baby with out its mother. we used the little light we had from my phone. i searched around everywhere. i moved boxes around i looked in side the boxes. i also looked inside of this really big closet we have down in the basement. Then i remembered where we kept all the flashlights. They are in the coat closet. So now i have to walk up all these stairs. As soon as i took my first few steps
